In 1988, a presentation at the National Association for Gifted Children (NAGC) 35th Annual Convention, entitled, "The Silverman/Waters Checklist: A New Culture Fair Identification Instrument" brought forth numerous requests from school districts to use the instrument. Later, an unpublished study was conducted with 1,000 children whose parents sought assessment at the Center. In this study, 84% of the children whose parents indicated that they fit three-fourths of the characteristics(true or very true) tested above 120 IQ. Another 11% demonstrated superior abilities in some areas, but had weaknesses that depressed their IQ scores below 120.
